ACH Debit Block

ACH Debit Block Service blocks all Automated Clearing House (ACH) transaction debits from posting to the specified account(s). There is an option to approve the payment of specific ACH debits on specific accounts prior to their receipt by the bank.

The bank has an established review and filtering process whereby all rejected ACH entries will be rejected from posting. The presented ach debits will instead be returned to the originator with an advice that the bank's account holder has not authorized the transaction.

No notification is sent to the bank's ACH Debit Block customer when an ACH debit request is rejected.

Completion of an ACH Debit Block Maintenance Form is required if customer wants to arrange a standing approval for specific recurring ACH debits that customer does not wish to block via the ACH Debit Block.

Customer should review and/or update any preapproved transactions periodically or as needed.

Transactions must be in NACHA format.
